

FOLEY INDUSTRIAL ENGINES INTRODUCES CLEANAIREXHAUST365 EXHAUST SCRUBBERS

Foley Industrial Engines has been manufacturing and selling diesel and gas engine scrubbers for more than two decades. The demand for the devices has grown considerably in recent years as OSHA and MSHA have strengthened regulations on engine exhaust, particularly in the mining, construction and transportation industries.

The firm's newest line of scrubbers is branded as CleanAirExhaust365 exhaust scrubbers, and Foley has become a major supplier of the devices in the United States. The emission control devices install at the end of an engine's tail pipe and make the exhaust emissions legal and safe to breathe by converting harmful exhaust to water and carbon dioxide. Inside the canister is a honeycomb substrate coated with a small amount of precious metals where the catalytic reaction occurs. Foley scrubbers are used on construction sites, as well as in tight spaces, such as mines and tunnels, throughout the country.

With a diesel exhaust scrubber, a contractor can work safely and legally in a confined space without harming his people. Foley has supplied scrubbers for both gas and diesel engines to forklift users, concrete saw operators, generator owners, and others who need to run an engine in an enclosed space.

While the company maintains an extensive inventory of parts and engines in stock, the scrubbers are a made to order item. They can be custom built for almost any engine.

Foley was founded more than a century ago and has long been known as a supplier for Perkins and Deutz engines and engine parts, Ford industrial engines, Twin Disc/Rockford power takeoffs and Zenith carburetors, as well as remanufactured exchange parts.
